Notre Dame’s Collaborative Research Network and IHR invite you to hear about:

Involving Community and Consumers in Research

Anne McKenzie has worked as the Consumer Advocate at UWA’s School of Population Health and the Telethon Institute for Child Health Research since January 2004. Her key role in this position is to increase consumer and community participation in health and medical research at both organisations.

Hayley Haines, the Program’s Consumer Project Officer, has international experience establishing systems to increase consumer and community participation in health and social care research.

Hear about this one-of-a-kind program in Australia, how researchers link with the community with focus on good practice.

Date: Friday 11th October 2013
Time: 3.00 pm to 4.00 pm, with refreshments
Venue: Institute for Health Research - ND46/209

RSVP to Heather Clarke for catering purposes
Email: heather.clarke@nd.edu.au or Ph. 9433 0900

The Notre Dame CRN project is supported through the Australian Government’s Collaborative Research Networks program