Lawyers should play three distinct, although overlapping roles: technical experts, wise counsellors and effective leaders. At the heart of the paper is a discussion on how lawyers maintain ethical and professional responsibility. Knowing what it means to be ethical does not mean that a lawyer will be ethical. Ethical, conceptual and regulatory questions are discussed with emphasis on the word ‘ethics’ combined with the word ‘professional’. What can go wrong if a lawyer is not ethical? What are the attributes of ethical leadership? What of behavioural ethics and the career ladder?
